The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless -

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claim 16 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Siegfried 6,247,467.

Siegfried shows a bow string release having a housing 27; trigger lever 26 having a constant travel distance; and a manually adjustable trigger adjustment mechanism 72 (figure 5). The housing has a front portion, toward head 22; a rear portion, toward strap 18; and a central axis between the front and rear (which would extend in the vertical direction in figure 2). The trigger adjustment mechanism is "substantially" coaxial with the central axis; "substantially" is broad terminology. Note that there is no structure claimed that would make the location of the adjustment mechanism critical.
